HONDO VISITED BY KNOB-KNOCKERS.

About as regularly as the farmer harvests his annual corn crop or the goat man clips his goat hair, Hondo is visited by what is evidently a gang of professional burglars who take more or less toll from the savings of our citizens.

This time they chose Sunday night and left traces of their handiwork at three places.

At the Alamo Lumber Co. they simply worked the lock on the safe, after the manner of an expert craftsman, pocketed the contents and left without doing further damage. About fifteen dollars in cash was taken.

They forced open the front door of the Public Service Company office with a pinch-bar and knocked the knob off the safe but left without forcing an entrance to the contents.

At the Leinweber Co. store a notice pasted over the knob of the safe warns that any tampering with it will release a charge of tear gas.

This warning evidently deterred them from attempting to open it, and they turned their attention to the men's wearing apparel department and mused up the stock considerably, apparently in an effort to "fit" themselves with shoes, shirts, gloves, etc. From appearances, considerable plunder must have been carried off but it was impossible to form an accurate estimate of the losses. Apparently after having jimmied at a door in the rear of the building they found it easier to open a window. Once inside the door was easily opened and the loot carried out that way. A pair of shoes were found some distance away, having evidently been lost by one of the miscreants in his hurried getaway.

Suspicion points to two strange men and a woman who were seen early in the night about town. The car number has been traced to a car that had been stolen from its owner some days ago, and later found wrecked outside the city and robbed of its license plates. Beyond this there is not much clue as to who the guilty parties are.

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

Today (Friday) is Constitution Day, and an outstanding one it is, for 150 years ago, Sept. 17, 1787, the signers of the Constitution placed their names beneath this historic document. These fifty-five men who met in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, in May of that year and elected Washington president of the Constitutional Convention, really made history such as they did not dream of at the time. They were attempting to unify a number of independent and quarreling states. The ninth state to ratify the Constitution and Bill of Rights, New Hampshire, in June 1788, completed the number necessary for adoption and the new government went into force in 1789 with George Washington, the first president of the United States.

We shall join the churches of the country to observe the memory of God's grace and blessing in the formation of this important Constitution, which, as Gladstone said was "the most wonderful stroke off at a given moment by the hand and purpose of man." Next Sunday the service will be in honor of Constitution Day.

We suggest that in the meantime, you look up a copy of that famous document and read it over. We are going to search again and try to find one and do the same. Much will be said and read about the Constitution in the next nineteen months of the Constitution Sesquicentennial, but we hope the Constitution itself will not be neglected. It's worth reading often.

Services Sunday, Sept. 19, English at 10:30 A. M.; Sprottville 2:30 P. M. Sunday school and Bible class 9:00 A. M.

GAME WARDEN BUSY.

Melvin E. Williams, State Game Warden for the District in which Medina County is included, was here from San Antonio Tuesday, and paid this office a pleasant call. Mr. Williams and his assistant, Bill Strickland, are having a busy time. The protracted drouth is drying up the streams and waterholes all over the country and thousands of young fish, many placed there by the government hatcheries at heavy expense, are being destroyed by cranes or perishing otherwise. Some have been moved from the Hondo Creek to the Medina River and two loads have been carried all the way to San Antonio, after all the permanent holes in the Hondo were stocked to their capacity. This week they were busy moving some from failing waterholes in the Seco Creek to Mr. J. P. Ephraim's tank where water is still plentiful.

Mr. Williams also informed us that the hunting season for mourning doves will open in Medina County on October 1st and last until November 15th inclusive. He says there are no white-winged doves in Medina County.

Salt for West Texas Wool

Salt is a mineral essential to the production of West Texas wool, so in order that wool growers may have a "return load" for trucks bringing their products to the Port of Corpus Christi, the Southern Alkali Corporation (shown in center) is erecting a plant for salt manufacture, raw materials to come from the Palangana dome in Duval County. A substantial volume of West Texas wool has moved through the lower Gulf Coast port, a loading scene being shown below. The new manufacturing activity is expected to stimulate interest in highways connecting the two areas of the state.

Corpus Christi, Texas, September 14.—Construction within the next few months of salt and chlorine units to augment the present chemical plant of the Southern Alkali Corporation at Corpus Christi will give the vast wool and mohair producing sections of West and Southwest Texas a more convenient Gulf Coast outlet and will expedite connections with waterways leading to the Eastern seaboard, according to recent announcement of the alkali corporation.

South and West Texas highway leaders, with announcement of plans for the new plants, have begun pushing negotiations for providing new highways to the wool producing area and to facilitate the trucking of range products to the seacoast at Corpus Christi.

The manufacture of salt at Corpus Christi will fill the need of truckers for "pay loads" from the seaport after delivering their wool there. Instead of returning to West Texas empty-handed, the truckers will be able to haul a load of salt on the return trip.

This new service will bring West Texas closer to the coast and will eliminate approximately 150 miles of travel on each trip of trucks hauling wool. A freight saving of approximately seven cents per mile, or about $15 per trip, will be effected through elimination of travel to ports farther from the West Texas sector which have been able to provide the salt in the past.

Present highway development efforts are being centered on the route designated as Highway 173, which would pass through Hondo, Devine and Jourdanton to Pleasanton, where it would connect with Highway 9, leading into Corpus Christi. This route would result in a round-trip saving of approximately 80 miles under present highway routings from that sector to Corpus Christi.

Our Federal Courts

Why does our Constitution provide for a system of federal courts? "There are in the Constitution," says Daniel Webster, "grants of powers to Congress, and restrictions on these powers. There are also prohibitions on the States. Some authority must, therefore, necessarily exist, having ultimate jurisdiction. . . . The Constitution has itself . . . established that authority . . . by declaring that 'the Constitution and the laws of the United States, made in pursuance thereof, shall be the supreme law of the land. . . . No State law is to be valid which comes in conflict with the Constitution, or any law of the United States passed in pursuance of it."

"But who shall decide this question of interference? To whom lies the last appeal? This the Constitution itself decides also, declaring [Article III] that 'the judicial power [of the Court] shall extend to all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States.' 'These two provisions cover the whole ground,' concludes Webster. 'They are, in truth, the keystone of the arch. . . . In pursuance of these clear and express provisions, Congress established at its very first session, in the Judicial Act, a mode for carrying them into full effect and for bringing all questions of constitutional power to the final decision of the Supreme Court. It, then, became a Government. It then had the means of self-protection; and, but for this, it would in all probability have been no [1832] among the things which are past."

SILVER JUBILEE CELEBRATED.

An event which will long be remembered by the parish of St. John the Evangelist Catholic Church was the celebration of the Silver Jubilee of the erection of the present church edifice, Sunday, September 12, on the church grounds. The event also marked the first festival of the parish which is to be an annual affair, and the observance of the Sesquicentennial of the Constitution of the United States.

The festivities opened with a High Mass in the church at 10 A. M. The building was well filled with both members of the home and neighboring parishes. Rev. Paul Potgens, pastor of St. John's, in his sermon eulogized those former pastors the fruit of whose labors is the present thriving and spiritually sound parish of St. John's. In particular he praised the late Rev. J. J. Myers, who was the first resident priest in Hondo, and under whose inspiration and cooperation the church was built twenty-five years ago.

Following the Mass, the school children, carrying American flags, marched in procession to the church grounds, and forming a circle about the flagpole flying "Old Glory," sang patriotic songs in observance of Constitution Day, which falls this Friday, September 17th.

Also in commemoration of the Federal Constitution, Hon. F. X. Vance, local attorney, spoke on the framing of the famous document, telling of the framing of the Constitution, its adoption by the states and of its importance through the 150 years since in the history of the American people.

Beginning at eleven o'clock A. M. dinner of barbecue, sausage, salads, pie and cake, iced tea and coffee were served to over 800 people. Visitors from Castrolville, LaCoste, Devine, D'Annis, Dunlay, San Antonio and many neighboring counties were seen lining the festive boards. Again in the afternoon supper was served to a large crowd.

Refreshments were sold on the grounds and games for the amusement of the visitors were played. At intervals during the day musical concerts of old favorites were given by Mr. Willie Ziegenbalg, strolling through the crowd playing his accordion. The Fort Lincoln Rangers, with their merry melodies, kept the crowd well entertained.

SCOTT-RICHEY.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Scott of Hondo was the scene of a simple wedding ceremony at 2 P. M. Sunday, September 12, 1937, when their son, G. W. Scott, claimed for his bride Miss Lola Mae Richey, daughter of Mrs. John Richey, of Sabinal. Rev. J. L. Morris, pastor of the Sabinal Church of Christ, performed the ring ceremony. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss Nellie Mae Scott on the violin, accompanied on the piano by Miss Adele Scott. The ceremony was performed against a background of lattice banded with late summer blossoms and fern. Other varied flowers decorated the living room.

The blonde bride wore a light blue satin ensemble with black accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. McWilliams. The home was adorned with garden flowers, and in the dining room the lace-covered table was centered with the white wedding cake which was outlined with a wreath of pink regina corona. Pink tapers in crystal candelabra lighted the table and the buffet.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott left following the reception for a brief bridal trip to Raymondville and points in the Valley. On their return they will be at home on a ranch near Sabinal.

The guests for the wedding and the reception were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. L. Richey and family, Mr. W. Richey and family, Mrs. John Richey, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Payne, Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McCaslin, all of Sabinal; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Scott of Uvalde, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Scott and family, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. McWilliams and family, George Muennink, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clements, all of Hondo; and Mrs. Bert Edwards and two children of Houston.

Mrs. Scott is the only daughter of Mrs. John Richey of Sabinal. She has lived in Sabinal all her life, having graduated in 1933 from the Sabinal High School. Mr. Scott is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Scott of Hondo and attended Hondo High School.

THE WEEK'S SHIPMENTS.

Corn shipments for the week were fifteen cars, 13 loaded out from Hondo and two from Dunlay.

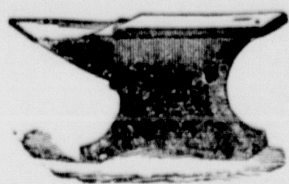

Other shipments were one car of cotton seed and one of hay. Five cars of used pipe were also loaded out at Dunlay.

Three cars of gasoline and one car of seed oats constituted the car-load receipts for the week here.

Eighteen bales of cotton the past week brought the season's shipments up to 464 bales. The cotton crop is practically gathered, and the premature opening of the late forming bolls has caused some deterioration in the quality of the staple.

NO MIRACLES.

By Clayton Rand.

Some business men expect a little advertising space to work miracles for them. If it doesn't sell the goods they gripe about it.

There is more salesmanship than advertising. One's merchandise has to be right to begin with. In every business service is essential, a clean store and courteous clerks have a lot to do with good-will building and increasing sales.

But all these things being equal the business man who can then tell his story in print has every advantage.

In the last analysis advertising is printed salesmanship, and you can't sell inferior stuff with different clerks and get by with it.

VILLAGE LIFE OR CITY GOVERNMENT—WHICH?

Approval of the motion introduced at the last meeting of the Dinner Club, and, by action at the time of that body, left pending for final action at the next monthly meeting, October 13th, that the Hondo Chamber of Commerce sponsor a petition for an election to incorporate Hondo, should bring every taxpayer in Hondo into attendance upon that meeting.

First, it should bring them because the act of postponing rather than passing the final vote and launching the campaign for incorporation forthwith was an act of courtesy on the part of the majority present toward those not present whose wishes in the matter had not been voiced.

Second, if the sentiment is still as it was when this proposition was last presented, it should be approximately ascertained in mass meeting and accepted without subjecting the county to the needless expense of an election and the community the turmoil, bitterness and boycotting inseparable from any community controversy.

And third, if the sentiment has changed and the majority now favors changing the free and easy ways of village life to which we are accustomed for the rule of city government, some definite objective should be chosen and the campaign pitched along lines calculated to achieve that objective.

This latter purpose is of vital importance if we are to make the change.

We must not kid ourselves that a municipal government will not cost us money—and lots of it—to be raised by taxation.

We must face the fact that worthwhile municipal improvements are inseparable from bond issues; that a bonded debt makes the municipality permanent for it cannot be abolished while bonds are outstanding as a mortgage against the taxable property within the municipality.

We must remember that the amount of bonds a municipality can issue is limited by the amount of taxable property within the corporation; that Hondo is possessed of no great wealth; and that for these reasons we should spend our bond money on the most essential things first.

To make sure we make no mistake, this vital point should be tentatively agreed upon as the first preliminary step and at the same time a slate of competent men pledged to the program should be selected for election to carry it out.

If you are not on hand at the appointed meeting you can blame no one but yourself for having no voice in what is done.

Let's be sure we are right—then go ahead and do it.

SPENDTHRIFT TERMS.

Early last Spring we read of the almost frantic efforts of the Treasury to maintain "orderly conditions in the money market," but in spite of masterful financial manipulations we none the less witnessed an alarming sag in "governments." The situation, fortunately, was patched up in time for the continuance of "deficit financing" to the tune of another billion dollars or so before the end of the fiscal 1936.

During the current summer things have gone along pretty smoothly outside of intermittent smatterings of "easy" and "weak" markets. With the coming of Fall, however, new

Nobody is up, and nobody's around. And while all about me is sleeping so sound,

Already with housework I'm drudging along,

Endeavoring to stem this wild torrent of song.

But try though I may, as if life were at stake,

My thoughts still come rushing, with scarcely a break—

In waves and in billows, in whirlpools and streams—

An ocean of deepest emotion, it seems,

Attempting to sunder, in part or in whole,

The very foundations of heart and of soul.

And that is the reason I must, at these times,

Re-open the floodgates of meters and rhymes.

P.T.A. Holds Reception for Teachers

The P.T.A. met for the first meeting in September on Monday the 12th. Mrs. E. G. Pope (formerly the vice-president) presided. The program followed with Mrs. Rogers as chairman. The "Mother's Singers" opened the program with the song "The Old Refrain." A welcome address was given by Mrs. McDowell welcoming the new mothers and the new teachers to the P.T.A. Miss Fly followed with a response. The program was closed with a talk on "Guidance of The Child in His Worlds" by Mrs. J. G. Barry. The topic of study for the year, by the P.T.A., is "Guidance of The Child in His Worlds."

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Pope for the business meeting. The minutes were read by Mrs. E. M. Nester. A letter of resignation from Mrs. Garland Martin (the former president) was read and accepted. Nominations were opened for a new vice-president as the position of president was voluntarily filled by the vice-president, leaving the position of vice-president vacant. Mrs. Highsmith was nominated for vice-president and was accepted.

The sixth graders with Miss Hodges as their home room teacher were honored with winning the book, having the largest number of mothers present. The following mothers are known as room mothers at the present: First Grade, Mrs. Barnitz Carle; Second Grade, Mrs. Gilliam; Fourth Grade, Mrs. Bob Kollman; Fifth Grade, Mrs. Roy Hunter; Sixth Grade, Mrs. Newell Woolls; Eighth Grade, Mrs. R. W. Gaines; Ninth Grade, Mrs. R. J. Noonan; and Eleventh Grade, Mrs. T. B. Knopp. The meeting adjourned and met in the H. E. room for refreshments. The Hospitality Committee was as follows: Mrs. T. E. Knopp, Mrs. E. R. Leinweber, and Mrs. N. C. Johnson. The Committee on Arrangements for tea in honor of teachers was composed of Miss Fly, Mrs. Sadler, and Mrs. Johnson.

NEW COURSES OFFERED.

The students of High School have the opportunity to take two new courses this year, namely journalism and Vocational Agriculture III.

The course of journalism covers a wide variety of subjects. It will include writing and editing of news, headline writing, the study of metropolitan and school papers, the history of journalism, mechanics of the newspaper, newspaper ethics, and work in special fields of writing. The class will get experience in such positions of the paper as the editorial, the column, the dramatic or literary criticism, and the feature story. Writing to THE OWL will be one of the class' activities. The class will study newspapers with the idea of improving our own. This course will serve to acquaint students with the profession of journalism.

Through a study of farm surveys and contact with key farmers, a course of study has been worked out for boys who are studying vocational agriculture for the third year.

The course consists mainly of the following: managing the farm business, repair and simple construction shop jobs, care and use of tools, cobblestone work, concrete work, landscaping the home grounds, and skills which include vaccination of livestock and poultry, dehorning, branding and skill in other tasks which the average farmer and rancher has to perform. In teaching agriculture an effort is made to teach things which are practical and need improvement within a locality or community.

Many field trips will be taken this year since the majority of the course will be skills which are best taught by actual doing the job.

OWLS OPEN GRID SEASON AGAINST CHAPARRALS.

The Hondo Owls will tangle with the Charlotte Chaparrals the night of Saturday, the eighteenth, in the opening game of the 1937 grid season for both teams.

The Chaparral's team is expected to be the best team produced by Charlotte in several seasons. Although playing in class "C" football, the Chaparrals should be stiff competition for the Owls, who got a late start in the fall training.

The Owls are out for a district championship this year. With a strong line and a somewhat inexperienced, but hard running backfield, the Owls will be opposed by several strong teams in this district. The traditional foes of Hondo, the Uvalde Coyotes, are expected to have a powerful team, as well as several other teams in the district.

Under new coaches W. W. "Doc" Henslee and B. McDonald, the system of play has been slightly changed. The team will be working hard for themselves as well as for the coaches and school.

OWLS LOSE SERVICES OF BONNARD ROTHE.

Due to severe burns on his back and hand, received when the gas tank of his tractor exploded, Bonnard Rothe is unable to start football training.

Bonnard, who would have been called upon to fill the place of J. H. "Ripper" Rothe, will not be able to participate in any of the early and middle season games. The loss of Bonnard will greatly weaken the Owl's backfield.

The Senior class and the entire high school extend wishes of a quick recovery to Bonnard.

The Hondo Owls began their football practice Monday, September 6, with thirty-three boys reporting. The team is to be coached by W. W. "Doc" Henslee and Shuford McDonald.

Assistant coach McDonald is from Waco and is a two year freshman from Baylor. He played football at a junior college before going to Baylor. The squad is larger than usual, but experience is lacking in most of the material. The following are lettermen around which the team will be built: Monroe Rucker, Capt., Tom Danie, "Babe" Windrow, Jack Fitzpatrick, Fred Bader, David Williams, and Glenn Pope. The squadmen and those out for the first time are: George Rucker, Nonnie Jennings, Henry Schuchle, Harry Kollman, Clinton Grell, Roland Gaines, Elmer Joe Leinweber, Walter Weyand, Joel Abbott, Clinton Hartung, Charles Finger, J. B. Redmond, Charles Richter, Bert Eckhart, Milton Bohmfalk, Elmo Pope, Wesley Moehring, Meyer Morris, Joe English, Billie Ney, and T. Duderstadt.

PEP SQUAD LEADERS AND UNIFORMS CHOSEN.

Last Monday evening the Pep Squad had a meeting and voted that the Pep Squad alone would elect Pep Squad leaders. Billie Merritt was elected head-leader and Kathleen Reilly and Susie Muennink were elected co-leaders. Since it is impossible to finish all of the uniforms in time for the game Saturday night, the Pep Squad decided to wait until the next game at Del Rio to appear in force in their new uniforms. The uniforms this year will consist of a blue corduroy skirt and bolero and a white silk blouse with Russian style sleeves, a white felt skullcap, white shoes and socks. They expect to really do things this year with three girls for leaders, new uniforms and Miss Radford for sponsor.

COOPERATE, COME, AND CHEER.

The football season has begun; the Hondo High Owls are playing their first game this week.

Football is a hard game. The boys work in this sport as they do in no other sport. Out of three months of working with fundamentals and the finer arts of football, the team plays only from nine to twelve games. Don't you think that you could come out and support the Owls in all their home games, and a good many of their road games?

A team backed by the town will be a much stronger team than one backed only by High School, and, after all, the team represents the town as well as the school.

Cooperate with the school and game officials, come out and see the team play, and cheer the Owls through to victory.

It will pay you to get the habit of reading the classified ads. Others with something to sell find them profitable advertising mediums. So will you; try it.

HISTORY OF THE OWL.

The first of THE OWL was published in 1928 when Mr. Barry was superintendent of Hondo High School. The exact date was October 9, 1928. The editor-in-chief of the paper then was Thomas Reynolds.

Ulrich Burger was the editor in 1929; Bradley Bailey in 1930; and Jean Ulbrich in 1931. From 1928 until 1931 THE OWL was published each year semi-monthly during the school months.

THE OWL was not published after 1931 until the year 1934, when the papers were made in a larger form. The earlier papers were made somewhat like magazines. They were about twelve inches long and eight inches in width. Starting in 1934 the paper was fourteen inches long and twelve inches wide. The editor of the 1934 paper was Carolyn Duderstadt.

On March 19, 1935, THE OWL was issued by the Freshmen, the next week by the Sophomores, and then the Juniors took the paper over for the rest of the year. Ivy Jean McCall became the editor in 1935.

Every April since 1934, the paper has been taken over by the Juniors for the remainder of the year and the following year. The editor of THE OWL of 1936-1937 was Edmund Ney and the editor of 1937-1938 is Robert David Windrow.

A wedding which came as a surprise to both family and friends was that of Miss Geraldine Ney of Hondo and Mr. William Brown of San Antonio, which occurred in San Antonio Wednesday, September 8, 1937. The bride wore a navy blue dress with burgundy accessories. After a brief honeymoon trip to Corpus Christi, Mr. and Mrs. Brown are at home in San Antonio.

Old Trail Blazer Visits Destroyed Early Day Texas Port of Indianola

When a boy of 11-years of age Joseph Mechler of Hondo, now 79, began driving an Ox-team with a caravan of freighters between the old port of Indianola and San Antonio and he continued this work for four years, making his last trip in 1873. While visiting in the home of L. H. Jungman in Corpus Christi recently, this old trail blazer expressed a desire to visit the site of the old port town, destroyed by a storm in 1886, after 64 years had elapsed since his last visit. Armed with a kodak and

Old Trail Blazer.

Trail blazing had a revival here last week when Joseph Mechler, 79, of Hondo fanned the fires of early days behind oxen between the Port of Indianola and Santone.

It was just 51 years ago last Friday, August 20th, that the Gulf of Mexico wiped the first Texas port at Indianola off the map of Texas. And it was just 64 years this summer that Joseph Mechler left Indianola on his last trip.

When he left, Indianola was a thriving seaport. When he returned last Sunday, Indianola was a landmark of some old pilings extending out in the Gulf and the foundation of the old courthouse.

But the more Mechler pondered on the remains of the first Texas port on his visit to the Port of Corpus Christi, the more did those memories on the trail between Indianola and Santone bob up.

Indianola was the only inlet to Santone and west, said Mechler as he began his story. He made his first trip at 11. He helped his dad, a French emigrant through the port, for four years before the railroads pushed the Texas frontiers further west. Then the Mechlers sold their oxen and started mule teams west from Santone until the railroad came in '82. Then they operated for a while down into the interior of Mexico and then, finally, farming and blacksmithing in Medina County, where he is spending his declining years.

A historical marker at Indianola now perpetuates the memory of that old seaport which men like Joseph Mechler helped build. Last Sunday Mechler read that marker. At a tourist camp nearby, he told to its owner, a man named Bell, some of the early day episodes of another Bell. The present Bell is a grandson, Mechler found out, of a fellow trail blazer to Santone.

Back in '73, '72, '70 and '69, Mechler, Father Mechler and five other Mechlers, all brothers of Joseph, would leave Indianola on the hazardous and dangerous march to Santone. They worked for "Old Man Granite", Mechler recalled. Granite was a wholesaler at the Alamo City and he received his merchandise at Indianola. Granite "circulated" among retailers, selling, while the Mechlers delivered with their ox teams.

Four-yoke ox teams trekked out of Indianola for Victoria and Yorktown, only stops to Santone. Sometime the trip took six weeks, sometime eight weeks, but they always made it until a railroad to Victoria killed the ox-cart business in the '70s, Mechler said.

probably a fishing rod or two, the trip was made on Sunday, August 8th, and it proved a most interesting one to Mr. Mechler despite the fact that only the ruins now mark the spot of the Texas early-day port town.

A feature writer on the Corpus Christi Caller-Times interviewed this veteran trail blazer and procured a picture of him as he is today and wrote the following interesting story of the early day life of Joseph Mechler:

Indianola was not only an import town. Cattle from Mexico and West Texas found their way to many northern dinner tables through the Port of Indianola.

Delivered to Indianola, cattle were kept in pens until a ship arrived. Then mule teams were hitched to the pens and the pen and cattle moved to shipside for transfer. St. Louis was the principal shipping center for Indianola-delivered cattle.

"One time some Mexicans delivered a thousand head of cattle at Indianola", Mechler cited, "and they were paid off in gold. They left Indianola and the next we heard of 'em they were dead. The Indians run off their horses one night and killed all but one man. He buried that gold somewhere out there and its still there, I suppose".

In those days when a trail was blazed every trip to the Gulf, Indians were still a worry to freighters, Mechler said. A freighter was always armed and each night outposts were stationed to guard the ox-wagon fortification from Indian attacks.

But Mechler said he never encountered Indians in battle although one of his most memorable occurrences of the trail was caused by Indians.

"We had a negro in our outfit", Mechler stated. "And a white man we called 'Buffalo'. They were having foot races in camp but Buffalo would always win.

"One time the Indians took in after those racers and hemmed 'em off from camp. The negro ran away from them but Buffalo was caught and we never saw him for about two years. When he came back from Mexico, he still had marks across his back where they whipped him."

Probably Mechler's disastrous experience of the trail was into Mexico. Four months Mechler's freight train took to travel 900 miles to Paral, Mexico, to the "Mino Pietro", owned and operated by a Chicago silver company.

Through jungles never traveled by white man before, Mechler struggled with his train, loaded with machinery. He was struggling too for $7.50 for 100 pounds of the machinery he hauled.

One stretch the train traveled for 60 miles without water, and it was not uncommon to go a day without water for teams and men.

Another time, 35 mules were watered with a pine cup. Found in a ravine too steep for mules, the water was dipped with pine cups and passed up the embankment and poured into buckets from which the mules were watered.

Put the trip 180 miles south of Chihuahua, however treacherous, was nothing compared to the disappointment ment which the train experienced back in Texas.

Wary and tired the freighter arrived back on this side of the Grande at Devil's River. Two men joined the party there and continued to the Government water hole.

At Government Springs, the driver stalked them. Two more men entered camp, asking for food.

Hospitality of the trail was traditional in the 19th century. The men were fed. And fed, they calmly ate two six-shooters apiece and as rain robbed the freighters of the gold silver they had received from gun sacks lined around the "Mino Pietro" office in Mexico.

Young and unfraid of disappearance, Mechler made his way back to Medina County to work with father, hauling supplies west to San Antonio, "mostly for the government."

In '82, the "Sunset" railroad carrying Mechler to farming and blacksmithing.

Until two years ago, when he died, Mechler was a blacksmith to the public. He hasn't worked since her death, but now lives with daughter and son at Hondo.

He was visiting another daughter son here last week. That son, L. Jungman of the Gulf Breeze cottages, Mrs. Jungman and Mr. Mrs. R. J. Dunkerly, 419 S. Street, accompanied Mechler to the ruins of Indianola.

Mechler is French. Snow white hair and mustache and dull tan complexion his Southern European features. His father at 21 came to Texas from Southern France in 1840. He took the Mechlers and other emigrants to what now is Castroville, Quini and D'Hanis. That was in 1840.

Today a monument stands in Castroville town square, "September Square". The names of the emigrants to Castroville are engraved on that monument in September Square.

Mechler's exploits are but memories of bygone days now. He outrank the Chisholm Trail that tended the length of Texas but enjoys them.

Memories? "Sure", Mechler offered, "but that was fun."

WHEN PEACE SHALL RULE

When Peace shall rule our age-ravished earth,
Now poisoned by its mustard-gas greed

And envy, blinded by the noxious weed
Of propaganda fostered from its birth

By those who care not how the check the mirth
And joy of helpless infancy, or bloe

Sad mother hearts, if thus their love may feed,
Shall we forge these years of bitter death?

Then, loving even those who ruled might
And forced us every one, as helples pawns,
To poison, shoot, and stab—or worse behind

The battle-front to make the meat to fight—
Can we forget,—from moment peace time dawns,

Erase all war-spawn horrors from the mind?

And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright, Gen. 25:31.

The incident in connection with these words is fairly known. Esau came home from the field, faint, dead tired, hungry; Jacob, the man close to the hearth, had fixed some pottage, lentils, the context says, and Esau's appetite jumped for it with full force. "Feed me, let me have some of it," he shouts with his usual impulsiveness. And Jacob's rejoinder, Sell me... birthright. What's the background, the meaning, the motive, the purpose and objective? The old-time rationalists tried to make the world believe, and some are riding the same notion to death today, that a good education at home or in school, is the panacea for all evils, the door to all treasures, the equipment for all aims, the armour for all fights, the preparation for all emergencies, the protection against all dangers, the cleanser of all sins, the redemption of all guilt, the regeneration of every soul, the sanctification of all lives, the whole and sole preparation for charity, the true peace for mind and soul, the source of all virtues, the foundation of all human values, the principle for all morality. (The old English general, Wellington, spoke of "shrewd devils" in that connection, and St. John, from the same viewpoint, puts it, tersely, What is born of flesh (sin), is flesh. No need of God and His guidance. His word and commandments, His Holy Spirit and power, His church with its benign message, no need of faith and prayer, no need of Christ and His redemption, these rationalists claimed. Education does it all, educating, drawing these things out of man exclusively. So far their ideas did not save the world nor brought peace to the sinner's heart nor ever will. Jacob, we know, had god-fearing parents, had the best educational influence at home and in the school facilities of his time, and we are the last to detract from the value of education as a life-sustaining and energizing force for civic duties and aims, nevertheless here we detect a grave twist and bent, a moral flaw that, as ever so often, lands a staggering blow on that educational optimism and on our expectations about the Lord's chosen representative, Jacob. And the flaw is typically Jewish down to our days. Sell, anything for sale, high and low, everything has a price, ideals and idols; watch your chance and drive a hard bargain when the other fellow is in a pinch or befuddled mood, as was Esau; drive it forcefully and fast, "this day," and reach for the highest possible without scruples and compunctions, and never mind the consequences, just so the profit is yours, after the old motto, "I to myself am dearer than a friend." Does Esau catch the drift of the motive and the moment?

And so another piece of pleasant history can be jotted down in the annals of this little community—last Sunday's Confirmation. The mothers of the confirmands had seen to the proper setting of the day with profuse flowers and potplants. The new hangings, a gift of these young people, decorated the lectern. The choir intoned some of their best selections, and the building again was much too small to hold the great number of members, guests and friends. Under the strains of "Jesus, Saviour, pilot me" the confirmands marched in, with several other hymns following during the service. Their examination showed to a fair degree that they had not labored in vain. The sermon gave them wholesome advice for a Christian life—the real proof for their heart condition. Confession and consecration were the highlights and showed the trend and purpose of the occasion. "I need Thee ev'ry hour" was their parting song. May God bless their future.

In the evening the Luther League program brought out another series of fine numbers for the visitors, as there is always something for everybody at these programs. The assignments for next time: Recitations, Mrs. Elmer Saathoff, Miss Eileen Hartman; select readings, Mrs. Frank Boehle, Mrs. Andrew Eckhardt; vocal selections, Miss Lillian Hartman, Mr. Frank Boehle; instrumental number, Mr. Edwin Grell.

Next Sunday we plan to administer the Lord's Supper for the newly confirmed and invite the classes of 1935, 1933, 1932, 1930 and 1928 to appear in a body and join them with many others. Try to be with us.

We missed Mr. Otto Grell at his usual field of activity and found that he was forced to an involuntary rest-cure. But things have improved much, we are glad to state.

And Miss Anna Marie Saathoff has made San Antonio her temporary abode, where she is attending the Nixon Commercial College. Much success.

This is the year to make big money on your grain by storing it in a Columbian Red Top Grain Bin and waiting for highest prices. The extra profit this first year may pay for your bin—and it will last 15 to 30 years.

And besides making extra money you'll save the big expense of storing your grain in terminal elevators. You won't ever have to dump grain on the ground. You'll have a safe, rat-proof, weather-tight, fire-safe place for storing everything.

These popular bins are easier to erect. Deep horizontal wedges give double strength. Come in and see for yourself.

Available in the following sizes: 500 bu., 1000 bu., 1350 bu., 1600 bu., and 2150 bu. Other bins up to 7050 bu. capacity.

The one safe place on the farm for feed, horses, seed, etc. Rat protection against fire, theft, and weather.

APPLICATIONS FOR 1938 REHABILITATION FARM LOANS.

The Resettlement Administration office will immediately begin taking applications for 1938 rehabilitation farm loans, according to announcement by C. W. Weston, Rural Supervisor of Uvalde, Real, Medina and Frio Counties. This applies to worthy clients already in the program as well as new applicants who can qualify. Applicants living in Medina county will apply at the Resettlement Administration office in Hondo. Mr. Weston will be in the Hondo office on Wednesday morning of each week.

A drastic reduction of field personnel necessitated closing twenty-five field offices thereby making it necessary to consolidate many of the county offices and assigning Medina county to the Uvalde staff.

Mr. Weston also advises that the name of this agency has been officially changed as of September 2, from Resettlement Administration to Farm Security Administration. This same order delegated the Farm Security Administration with responsibility for administering Title 1-2 of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

Mr. Weston has just returned from A. & M. College where a special short course was held for all supervisory personnel of the Farm Security Administration. Mr. Milo Perkins, Assistant Administrator, Washington, D. C., addressed this meeting and his remarks indicated that not only is this agency showing evidence of becoming permanent, but that drastic reduction in the Washington, regional and state offices will be made, and as these reductions are made more authority and responsibility will be placed on the county supervisors thereby eliminating much of the present procedure which would simplify and expedite the entire program. It is the policy of the administration to assist every worthy low-income farm family. By this statement is meant: those who are now living on the farm and made the major portion of their living the past year from actual farm operations. Either farm owners or tenant farmers (third and fourth) are eligible to participate in this program provided, however, that their past records justify it. No cash renters or share croppers will be considered, nor will single persons except where such person is recognized as the head of the family and supporting the family. Loans will be made for any legitimate purpose that would contribute to the borrower's rehabilitation; such as workstock, subsistence livestock, dairy stock, basic beef cattle, sheep, goats, hogs, bees, etc. In each case borrower must be so situated that he can amply and satisfactorily care for any and all livestock purchased.

Mr. Weston advises that he will be pleased to address any commercial or civic group, or rural gathering in order to familiarize everyone with the provisions of this agency.

MYSTERY THRILLER.

"Charlie Chan at the Olympics", which shows Monday and Tuesday at the Colonial Theatre, is a thrilling chapter in the adventures of that famed Oriental detective played by Warner Oland. This time Charlie stumbles onto an international crisis while on a fishing trip with his number two son, when they discover the wreck of an airplane from which a radio-control device has been stolen. The case leads Chan to Berlin, where his number one son, Keye Luke, is competing in the Olympics Games with the American team. The two are immediately embroiled in a series of kidnappings, disappearances and murders.

MOTHER'S CRY.

The house is empty, the hours drag, I've nothing to do, my footsteps lag— The evening hours seem far away, My baby started to school today.

I stood and watched him down the lane, He turned and waved again and again, My blinding tears began to start, But I checked my foolish mother heart.

The noonday meal was a lonely one, We two alone—like life was done. We smiled in a rather half-hearted way, Our baby started to school today.

I know he is happy and eager and glad, And it's foolish of me to be lonely and sad, But my arms are empty, the hours are gray— For my baby started to school today.

—Elsie Parker, Dallas.

MOST LITTLE TOWNS.

Most little towns are smug and neat With their prim dresses starched and clean; And watchful eyes which guard each street With a content grown old and lean.

I do not like a town like these. My heart is much too wild and young To be hemmed in by age-old trees, Or torn to shreds by some lank tongue.

—D. Maitland Bushby, Humboldt, Ariz.

UNREST.

My Soul is restless-like, Weird shifting desert sands Harassed by vagrant winds Flash spectacular images Upon the mental canvas of my soul.

Keep my heart; It's for you only. You may need it some dark day When you're lonely.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING AT BIRY DEDICATED.

The new school building at Biry was dedicated Saturday night, Sept. 11th.

After several selections from the Devine High School Band, under Mr. Schroeder's direction, Mr. O. K. Schmidt, Secretary of Biry School Board, dedicated the building to the people of the community. Mr. Schmidt expressed the deep interest of the school board in the future educational advantages of this community with the hope that this building should contribute materially to its educational needs.

Supt. Willingham of Devine complimented our new building and expressed, in an unreserved manner, his interest in our school and his willingness to cooperate in every way possible for our success.

County Supt. Schweers made us feel good by comparing our new building to what we have had to endure since the old building burned. He placed a goal before us worthy of our efforts and then expressed his willingness to help us reach it.

Dr. C. E. Evans of San Marcos was the speaker for the occasion. His subject was "The Service Station", which, in opinion, could not have been more appropriate. He pictured the school as the real service station of the community and the State. Dr. Evans has been in the field of education many years, and he has made those years count. His talk furnished much food for thought.

After Dr. Evans spoke, the Band again played for us. That band surely made a hit. If there was anything short about that bunch, it's that they found the short cut to our hearts. Why they even brought their chairs.

The P. T. A. sold cake, punch, ice cream and sandwiches, after the program and everyone went home nappy and far from hungry—The Devine News.

PADGETT-PICHOT.

On Saturday afternoon, September 11, 1937, at five o'clock at the Methodist parsonage in Hondo Miss Eva Mae Pichot became the bride of M. B. Padgett. The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Pichot. Her costume was a suit of navy blue wool with matching accessories. Mr. Padgett is a prominent young ranchman of Tarpley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. S. Highsmith of the Hondo Methodist church in the presence of a few members of the immediate family. They went to Kerrville and other points on a wedding trip after which they will return to their home near Tarpley.

Russian Note Shies Italy

FURTHER evidence of the complete accord of the two great Fascist governments was revealed when Germany joined Italy in refusing to be represented at the Nyon, Switzerland, conference to end "piracy" on the Mediterranean. The Nazis gave the same excuses as Italy: That the action of Soviet Russia in accusing Italian submarines of sinking two Russian merchant ships and demanding full indemnity made impartial conclusions of the parley impossible, and that the whole affair might better be ironed out by the committee for non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

So heated were the differences between the Italians and the Russians, it was feared the incident might lead to a break in diplomatic relations, if not to actual armed conflict.

Great Britain, Russia and France went right ahead with their plans for the conference. British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was instructed, however, to make no proposals which would tend to divide the Mediterranean powers into Fascist and anti-Fascist groups. It was believed he would propose that merchant ships be allowed a naval convoy through the danger zones.

Britain, one of the chief sufferers from the submarine attacks on shipping, was embarrassed shortly before the conference was to begin when a Spanish insurgent cruiser (Italy is known to be aiding the insurgents) commandeered a British merchantman off Palermo, Sicily, and confiscated her cargo of Russian oil consigned to the Spanish loyalist government.

Yanks in Far East 'Kick'

AMERICANS in Shanghai, constantly in danger of their lives,abled Washington, demanding the protection of United States ships. The American Chamber of Commerce in the war-torn city asked Secretary of State Hull for immediate clarification of the State department's stand. Some of them were bitter toward President Roosevelt, who, from his yacht, had told newspaper men that Americans in the war zone would remain there at their own risk. No deadline for evacuation had yet been set, and then rumors spread that the United States flagship Augusta was making ready to leave Yangtze waters, and panic spread among the Yanks in Shanghai.

Many business men, with lifetime savings invested there vigorously urged the President to adopt "a foreign policy with a strong front and keep the American flag waving." One veteran Yank resident circulated a petition demanding that the President "get off his yacht, get on his feet and get some guts above them."

American missionaries and business men protested that the United States' position in the Far East was largely the result of their life's work, and insisted on a more steadfast attitude to keep the American flag in China. The State department replied that there was a broad distinction between getting out of the line of fire and relinquishing privileges established over the years. The consuls in many Chinese ports were ordered to leave their posts.

Opposition Surprises Nippon

JAPANESE naval guns and bombers carried the war 600 miles south of Shanghai when they attacked the port of Amoy, which houses a huge Chinese fort and arsenal, opposite the island of Formosa. Their bombs carried little effect and the shore artillery chased the warships, completely disabling one. The battle was but thirty miles from Hong Kong, recently ravished by a typhoon.

Elsewhere along the far-flung front the Japanese were meeting with opposition. A salient of which they had not expected. Along the Forcing front, 200,000 Chinese, including crack German-trained divisions, were successful in holding back 60,000 Japanese; it was said to be the severest opposition the Japs have met since they fought Russia in 1904.

Japanese aerial bombardments continued in the Chapel, Kiangwan, Taichong and Yanchong districts of Shanghai. The continued peril of the international settlement and the French concession spurred the American, British and French consuls to demand of both the Japanese and Chinese that their forces be withdrawn from that vicinity. Scores of noncombatants were daily being killed and wounded there by falling bombs and shells.

But Japan's long-awaited "big push" had not yet materialized. It was believed large reinforcements were being awaited. The Chinese man power was beginning to tell against the inferior numbers of the Japanese.

One of the war's most sensational military coups occurred in the rocky hills west of Peiping when 4,000 Japanese troops were reported wiped out by the Chinese in ambush. The Japanese line was said to have been driven back five miles by the terrific onslaught, and Japanese commanders were reported more worried than ever over the success of their invasion in this sector.

Another of the war's great horrors was perpetrated when the Japanese bombed a refugee train 30 miles south of Shanghai, killing 300 and wounding 400 noncombatants. Chinese bombers' efforts at reprisal were ineffective.

Only in the northern province of Chahar did the Japanese make real progress. There they captured the capital city of Kalgan. A commission of 100 "prominent" Mongols and Chinese (many of them known to be associated with the Japanese army) was setting up a new "popular" autonomous government under Japanese control.

Plague Upon a Plague

JOHN L. LEWIS, fire-eating chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, let fly a rebuke at President Roosevelt for implied backwatering on campaign promises and hinted at the possibility of a third party in the elections of 1940. In a radio speech he declared:

"It ill behooves one who has supped at labor's table and who has been sheltered in labor's house to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both labor and its adversaries when they become locked in deadly embrace."

This was regarded as an answer to the "plague on both your houses" which President Roosevelt called down on extremists of both sides in the "little steel" strike. In his campaign for re-election he had "supped at labor's table" to the extent of a half-million-dollar contribution to the Democratic national committee by the C. I. O.

Lewis suggested that it would be a wise move for labor and agriculture to wage their battles together politically.

"Labor has suffered just as our farm population has suffered," he said, "from a viciously unequal distribution of the national income."

"The exploitation of both classes of workers has been the source of panic and depression, and upon the economic welfare of both rests the best assurance of a sound and permanent prosperity."

16,098,000-Bale Cotton Crop

THE fifth largest cotton crop yield in the nation's history was forecast by the Department of Agriculture, which estimated a 1937 crop of 16,098,000 bales. The cotton crop September 1 was 75 per cent of normal, indicating an average yield per acre of 228.5 pounds.

Chinese Won't 'Cooperate'

JAPAN'S aim in the undeclared war is to make China submit once and for all to her will, the Japanese government virtually admitted through its foreign minister, Koki Hirota. The seriousness of Japan's intentions were obviated when Emperor Hirohito, departing from precedent, referred to the conflict in detail in a public statement from the throne, and when it was revealed that Nippon is preparing more appropriations for her already heavy war chest.

Hirota blamed the Chinese central government for the present fighting because it refuses to "co-operate" with Japan in "maintaining peace" in eastern Asia. Japanese military action against China, he said, was taken to make impossible the recurrence of the current hostilities. "Japan," he said, "has no other objective than to see a happy and tranquil North China and Sino-Japanese relations so adjusted as to enable us to put into practice our policy."

"Since China, ignoring our true motive, mobilized her vast armies against us, we can do no other than to counter by force of arms."

The emperor, in addressing the houses of parliament, greatly impressed his subjects with a review of the war, arriving at much the same conclusions as Hirota had. The session of parliament was called to consider the appropriation of $592,000,000 for the campaigns in China, raising the total of the nation's war chest to $737,000,000.

Dodd and Hull Disagree

BY THE time this is printed William E. Dodd may no longer be United States ambassador to Germany. In an interview he vigorously opposed any American representation at the Nazi party congress in Nuremberg.

Ambassador W. E. Dodd

Secretary of State Cordell Hull refused to comment upon Dodd's attitude, but announced that the United States would be represented at the conference which will celebrate Hitler's rule by Prentiss Gilbert, American charge d'affaires in Berlin.

Secretary Hull explained that the action was being taken merely as a friendly gesture to the Nazi government, with whom he said the United States is in complete diplomatic accord. Diplomatic reports have indicated that Dodd, now vacationing here, had made himself unpopular in Berlin because of criticism of the Hitler government's policies. Rumor had it that he might not return to his post.

McGrady Quits Labor Post

EDWARD F. McGRADY, assistant secretary of labor, and chief strike trouble shooter of Mme. Frances Perkins' department, resigned to devote his talents to radio. He left his $9,000-a-year job to take the post of executive vice president in charge of industrial relations with the Radio Corporation of America, at a salary variously estimated at from $15,000 to $50,000.

In a letter to McGrady, President Roosevelt expressed "deep regret," and added, "Your efforts to maintain harmonious labor relations have always been in the public interest and in fairness to workers and management."

McGrady had been one of the federal mediators who failed to achieve a settlement of the C. I. O. strike against "Little Steel." In his new position, his services will be available to the government upon call, it was reported.

Hitler: 'Stand by Japan'

A DOLF HITLER, in a manifesto to the German nation, offered to stand by both Italy and Japan in a "defensive fight against bolshevism." He charged that the "two major wars" now going on (the Sino-Japanese and the Spanish civil wars) were the result of "attempts to spread communism."

The Reichsfuehrer's speech was read to the Nazi party congress in Nuremberg while he sat on the platform. It could not have been better timed in view of the current friction between Italy and Soviet Russia over submarine piracy in the Mediterranean.

Germany and Italy's "community of interests" have emerged in recent months, he said, "more and more an element in the defense of Europe against chaotic imbecility."

His manifesto continued: "Our (anti-communistic) agreement with Japan serves the same fundamental mission—to stand together in defense of world civilization."

Postage Stamp War

HONDURAS and Nicaragua were on the verge of running up the curtain on their own little show in honor of Mars, the god of war—all over a postage stamp. Nicaragua issued a stamp bearing a map which showed an area along the Honduran boundary as "territory in dispute." Honduras claimed it was an affront to their sovereignty, citing the Spanish award which both sides accepted in 1906 and which was supposed to have settled the territory question. Hondurans were further incensed when Nicaraguan radio speakers hinted the Honduran army couldn't lick a postage stamp, and proposed sending troops into that country.

On Tiptoe

By Stewart Edward White

"I was getting preachy, wasn't I? Well, the thing the world needs most is breathing-time, time to play more and to soak up the things that never come to a man when he's in a hurry or surrounded by the buzz-flies of detail. What the work-a-day world needs most is leisure, a little leisure."

His laughing face had become grave, and his dancing eyes level.

"The trouble is," said Burton, "people are never satisfied. If they'd be contented to go without so many frills they'd have leisure enough."

"No, you're wrong. They should have the frills. The frills represent the grace and beauty of life. We all have an instinct for frills; and real instincts should be gratified—in proportion. But the point is, frills are too hard to get. A living is too hard to get. Heaven forbid we should ever get anything without working for it; that is absolutely fatal. But there's no sense in having to perform soul-leading and grinding toil for it."

"I have all the frills; I never work for them," challenged Burton suddenly. "What about me?"

"You are young and the field of your life is yet in the distance," replied Davenport slowly and soberly. "You have had gifts; but it is not yet the time for you to know that every gift bears its responsibility."

"I'm afraid I've never thought of that," faltered Burton in rather a diffident voice after a moment. "But what has the battery to do with this?"

"Why, don't you see? Every invention that reduces the labor necessary to produce things is a step toward that leisure for the race."

"Yes, I can see that," acknowledged Burton. She was just the least bit disappointed at so prosaic a culmination to an argument that had aroused her imagination. But his next words rekindled her.

"And this little battery, multiplied a million times," went on Davenport,

"means power; power direct, without the human toll and labor now necessary to produce it. Thousands of men work underground digging coal; thousands more are transporting it, handling it, placing it under boilers. An army is digging or conducting oil wells; another is chopping wood; still another is building dams for water power. And think still further of the vast numbers who manufacture and handle and deliver the implements and instruments by which these raw materials of power are turned into the power itself—steam engines, dynamos and all the rest. It's tremendous!"

Her eyes were wide, staring unseeing down the moonlit aisles. She was seeing—imperfectly, for her experience could not furnish the requisite materials to her incandescent imagination—these swarms of liberated men, coming up grimed from underground, from the factories, from the ends of the earth, dropping the obsolete tools of a clumsy circumvention.

"Millions of them," repeated Davenport, "released for the production of that which our bodies and our souls actually consume."

"They'd lose their jobs," she objected. "Could they get others?"

"It would mean a big readjustment," acknowledged Davenport, "but you must remember that it would not happen all at once. And every big change means a readjustment. The history of industry is full of such readjustments. Every invention that has reduced the amount of labor necessary to produce any given thing has caused such a readjustment. Just look at the things done now by machinery that were done by hand a hundred years ago. Look at the row the cotton gin made, or weaving machinery. Same thing on a smaller scale. In the long run—"

"Yes, in the long run," she agreed, "but the present, the immediate present is what I am thinking of."

"It would mean a readjustment," he acknowledged again, "and it would mean hardship and sacrifice in some cases. It is by hardship and sacrifice always that the great things of the world are bought. There is hardship and sacrifice in war, but men undergo it gladly for a cause. There is hardship and sacrifice in pushing out into the wilderness. But always when the hardship and sacrifice are past, the world has advanced. It is an honor to have been chosen."

"I doubt if the coal miner out of a job would appreciate that fact," she proposed, smiling a little whimsically a little tenderly, at his exalted face in the moonlight. "It would look to him an undeserved injustice."

"Who of us does appreciate our real benefits?" replied Davenport. "The thing done for ourselves at the expense of others sets us back; the thing done for ourselves without harm to others sets us forward a little way; the thing done for others really helps us on."

"I seem to remember cases where people have prospered amazingly at the expense of others," she said, still a little quizzically.

He stared at her in open amazement.

"Good Lord!" he cried. "You aren't one of those people who thinks that all development and all evolution for all eternity are started and finished for keeps in this earth phase of our existence?"

"What do you believe about it?" she countered.

"I know very little of what I believe. It's too big for me; or anyone else. But I do know a few things. I know that when I get out of here I shall go right on working and right on developing through work. And I do know that every time an opportunity comes along and I sidestep it, or deliberately do the wrong thing, that opportunity starts at once bearing compound interest against me. Some day I'll have to pay up both that opportunity and the compound interest. No, I don't know how. I've got a lot of beliefs; but those are the only two things I really know."

A little wind came wandering. The girl shivered.

"It's—it's a terrible thought," she faltered.

He laughed.

"Why, no; it's a very inspiring thought," he said. "But we're talking life a prof. in ethics. Point is that even though the readjustment to a world of direct power will be an uneasy one, the end will be worth it. Listen: have you stopped to think even a little in detail what that will mean to human kind? The burden of brutish toil lifted? The lighter, pleasanter, more graceful burden of wholly creative labor substituted?"

He leaned forward, and in his eagerness his boyish, laughing face became grave and mature. With vivid sentences he sketched the world as he saw it: a reorganized world, free to put all its energies into the positive creation of those things which men's true instincts crave; producing its abundance by honest, sincere, necessary labor, but accomplishing the production without the exhaustion of squalor. It was no impossible utopia; it was no absurd dream of an impossible "equality"; but it was a world of opportunity released from pressure. What men did with the opportunity would still be, as it had always been, a matter for themselves. But no longer would there be any reason or necessity for the submergence under inexorable circumstance of the man whose hands reached toward the stars. That is what he envisioned; and that is what Burton, kindling to his ideas, saw too. And as she had not lived with the idea, as had he, and was unaccustomed to it, she was the more eagerly afire.

CHAPTER VII

By the campfire Grimstead and his Second in Command talked in low tones.

"What about this, Gardiner?" demanded the Pirate Chief as soon as the young people were out of hearing. "It sounds like the most insane thing I ever heard. Sounds like perpetual motion. But this young fellow has a way of calling the turn—"

"There's no real scientific reason why he hasn't got it," stated Gardiner, "any more than there's any real scientific reason why, if there are spirits, they shouldn't communicate with us in certain conditions. We simply don't believe either of them because it hasn't been scientifically proved to us that they have."

"In other words it's possible, but not probable; and we're from Missouri," said Grimstead.

"Exactly. It is well known that the earth lies in a vast magnetic field and that that magnetic field means power. Trouble is to isolate your generating—or rather transforming—apparatus."

"Huh?" ejaculated Grimstead.

"Well, suppose you sunk a bottle without a cork a few thousand feet into the sea. At that depth there is a tremendous pressure—enough to crush in a thick steel shell—and of course such a force is power. But sink your bottle with a cork in it, and very promptly that cork will be forced in. The thing that forced it is, of course, power. What you've done is to get outside of your source of power. Same thing here. We're in this magnetic field, but we're all soaked up with it. If we could get outside it, or, rather, get it outside us, we could use it. If this fellow has anything, he's done just that."

"Then you think it possible?"

"I didn't say so. I said merely that it is not scientifically impossible."

"Well, that we can soon determine. I'm glad you've got this fool bet. It will give you a good excuse to keep close tabs on the whole thing. This may prove important, Gardiner, and I want you to make it your business while we are here to stay on the job. It is business; and it might conceivably amount to a big thing for both of us."

"I shall not leave the place while the test is on."

"It will pay to make no mistakes. You will of course be taken care of if the thing's any good."

Gardiner nodded.

"Well, so much for that. Simmins," Grimstead addressed that silent person, "do you suppose you could find me some worms in the morning?"

"Worms, sir?" repeated Simmins incredulously.

"Yes, worms. The kind that robins pull up. Fishing worms."

"I could not say. I am sure, sir," said Simmins with hauteur.

"Well, you dig around the wet places and see. I want a nice little can full."

Simmins disdained reply. It was no part of the duties either of a butler or of a chauffeur, as he understood them, to furnish worms to anybody. Feeding Punketty-Snivvies was as low as he'd got up to date, and that was only in deference to Miss Burton. The bright and hilarious thought came to him that he might advise Grimstead to use Punketty-Snivvies for bait instead of worms; and he dramatized delightfully in great detail just his own manner of haughty dignity leavened with dry humor and the astonished appreciation of his employer.

"You are right, Simmins," rejoined the latter, "such menial tasks are beneath the dignity of one like yourself. I should never have asked it, and I offer my apologies. The request was proffered without thought."

Whereupon Grimstead, by way of emphasizing his excuses, offered Simmins one of his dollar cigars—with the flavor of which, by the way, Simmins was already thoroughly familiar.

Fortunately there was another side of Simmins that advised his not staging the drama. That side was practical and had a vision of its own. So after savoring his triumph for a few moments Simmins put it away in cold storage and substituted another speech of inquiry as to how early worms would be needed. Simmins led a hidden life of haughty and scornful repudiation and revolt, always successful. But he always went and did it.

He went and did it the next morning though he wanted intensely to be in on the mysterious rites at the car. Rapscaillon was sorry for him, and as Simmins was apparently engaged in doggy business, the terrier helped him dig. The ground was soft and it was very good digging, though the motive for excavation was obscure. Sniff as he might, Rapscaillon could get no faintest whiff of ground squirrel, mole or gopher. He told this to Simmins, but the poor goot went right on digging just the same. Thereupon Rapscaillon also went right on digging, though, he knew perfectly it was hopeless; for such is the fine courtesy of dogs.

However, there were worms. A sufficient quantity was secured about the hour it came time to move camp. The famous battery, lashed to the running board, had been connected up with the self-starter which was now turning over in the laborious and vociferous manner peculiar to the species. Grimstead and Gardiner were inclined to stand and watch it in fascination; but Davenport was quite unimpressed.

"That's all there is to it," said he. "Now all we have to watch out for is that she doesn't run dry of lubrication. Simmins can keep track of that."

He turned away.

"Now we've got a good morning's work in front of us," he announced cheerfully. "I picked a good place for camp, before breakfast. We must move camp, and then we must make a start on our road out."

"I'm going 'fishin' this afternoon," warned Grimstead.

Davenport laughed.

"And I'm going walking back to the ridge, with Miss Burton if she cares to go, to see how the rhododendrons are making it."

"Rhododendrons? Real rhododendrons? Like those in the park?" cried Burton.

"The same."

"Well," growled Grimstead, "I don't see why we shouldn't get at it. Simmins ought to be able to move camp. Here, Simmins, you move the tent down, and my things, and Miss Burton's and Mr. Davenport's. Fix up a good camp, like this one. You and Mr. Gardiner are to stay here."

"Sir," answered Simmins with entire respect but firmly, "it is true I take your wage, but in the wildwood it is immemorial custom that all men are equal and perform their equal shares of the daily tasks. It is true also that a leader or directing head is necessary to any co-operation; and I am entirely willing to obey the command of such a leader. But I submit that that leader should be the one best qualified to command. Mr. Davenport is our logical command. I will cheerfully carry out his decisions, even should, as in the present instance, they prove distasteful."

This speech Simmins translated into, "Yes, sir, very good, sir," and at once set about his task.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEETS.

The Castroville Chamber of Commerce met in regular session Monday night with Joe Bader, chairman, presiding. About forty members responded to roll call. The enthusiasm of the members, in spite of the extreme warm weather, did not wane. The C. of C. has done effective work the past year. The new bridge over the river and the straight 100-foot highway through the burg seem assured. Mr. Maddox and Mr. Bossy of the highway department viewed the proposed projects with scrutinizing eyes and will soon make their final report to the Highway Department at Austin. Several members of the C. of C. have lent a helping hand to the members of the Highway Department when requested to do so.

The C. of C. has casually discussed two great projects that should receive the support of every member and citizen of the Medina Valley. One is that of a consolidated High School that conforms to the recommendations of the survey made by the National Educational Survey Board. This recommendation calls for a system of eleven years with a minimum of from 200 to 225 in the elementary schools for six teachers, the minimum for the high school should be 200 for seven teachers. The school should be located in a relatively permanent center easily accessible through bus transportation to all the pupils of the district. This will eliminate educational weaknesses, inequalities and inadequacies, and will provide a sounder, more uniform and more attractive school organization insofar as economy and efficiency are concerned. The assessed valuation per pupil of such a proposed district should not be less than $2,000.00.

Deep water for the safety of the community was "touched" and likely will be another item which the C. of C. will support.

After adjournment the members lined up along the festive board and satiated their Epicurean nature with an abundance of tamales and iced tea.

The next meeting will be held on the first Monday in October.

ANVIL SPARKS.

"quarterly financing" must be faced. "Tightening of the money market", or in layman's language, higher interest rates on borrowed funds, must be avoided; therefore, the "stage" must be set by further financial juggling. Likewise, the bond market has just taken another slide and must be "rescued".

Whence came all these strange words and phrases: "deficit financing", "orderly conditions in the money market", "setting the stage", and "rescued"?

The answer is simple. The public debt of the Federal government recently passed the $37,000,000,000 mark. The nation is continuing to go into debt at the rate of several billions of dollars annually. And, no effort has been made to correct this sad state of affairs. The average citizen, while he may know all the details of a big league baseball game, knows little or nothing of the government's financial affairs—and cares less!—Industrial News Review.

POLITICIANS DODGE TAXATION ACCOUNTING.

The most vital domestic problem before the next Congress will be taxation. The last Congress did nothing to reduce the tax burden or lower the national debt.

The public has heard too much political bunk promising economy in government. It has listened to too many lies by candidates running on economy and tax reduction programs, who once elected, vote for every spending measure proposed. It is weary of pledges that mean nothing. It wants a definite plan for putting our disordered fiscal house in order.

In recent congressional sessions, bills have been introduced which, among other things, would broaden the tax base—that is, make more persons pay direct taxes to the Federal government. Such plans have the approval of almost every economist and tax expert. Yet, when brought to a vote, they have always been decisively beaten. Politicians fear an equitable tax system which would bring home to the maximum proportion of the population the tax burden it bears. Officeholders hope that our citizens won't learn that 29 to 25 per cent of the cost of everything they buy is represented by taxation. But they are finding it out.

The first essential step is to reduce government spending. The second is to adopt a systematic plan for reducing the debt. The third is to reduce taxes.

Can our senators and representatives dodge an accounting much longer?—Industrial News Review.

FARM TENANT AID.

"There is a patent inconsistency in the stock argument for Government aid to farm tenants to assist them in purchasing homes," says the Dallas News. "This argument is to the effect that there is an alarming decline in farm ownership as against increase in farm tenancy, therefore Government aid to purchase homes is needed. The logical question arises: If the farmers who now own their homes are losing them, how can the resourceless tenant be expected to make an uphill fight toward ownership and then maintain it, merely through the assistance of a low-interest-rate Government loan? The movement for loans to tenants is like too many other present-day economic panaceas; it doctors the symptom rather than the cause and is really political in design.

"The same thought applies to the recent suggestion of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States that tenant farmers be helped through loans from private sources, guaranteed by the United States Government. That would be well for the private lending agencies but it would leave the Government holding the sack. The policymakers of the national chamber, and the Federal Government, too, ought to know that it will be difficult for farmers to buy homes as long as they must sell their products in an open market and buy largely in a tariff-protected market, exchanging their own 30-cent-an-hour labor for goods produced by dollar-an-hour labor.

"When agriculture is made a profitable industry, then Government loans, or Government-subsidized loans, to aid tenants in buying homes will be effective. Loans to individuals in such a handicapped industry as cotton or wheat growing will result in loss to the lender."

One would think from reading the above that the editor of the News had been reading FARMING, at least to some extent!

For as far as it goes the News is eminently correct.

But if it will continue to study the tenant farmers' problem it will learn that, helpful as a free market would be and essential as it is for the farmers' prosperity, there are other equally vital essentials just as lacking as the market.

For instance, a stabilized currency, so controlled by the government as to make it available when needed at home and equitably exchangeable with foreign countries in settling trade balances, is a prerequisite first of a successful use of a free market.

And there are other things necessary besides adequate money and free access to market to assure farm prosperity.

But enough for one lesson! One step at a time is the way of educators.

And the way to teach is to—"Lead by easy steps from the known to the unknown."

If the Newsman will keep stepping in the right direction we opine he will eventually become a "knowing cuss"!

SPENDING TEMPTATION.

Instead of borrowing in the future as in the past, the administration plans to use social security funds to supply government cash for spending. These funds are being collected in increasing amounts and soon will be running high into the hundreds of millions of dollars annually. They can be invested in government securities. So cash will be obtained that way, the money will be spent and workers and employers who have paid it in the form of taxes will be left with the government's I. O. U.'s. It had been expected that this would be the procedure. But nothing has been done about it. The practice would be unsound and ought to be prevented. It has been shown repeatedly that there is no real need for the vast accumulation of social security reserves under the present act. The old-age benefits could be maintained on a pay-as-you-go basis and contributions of both workers and employers could be reduced. At the same time, there would be removal of the temptation to continued spending. The program could be made safer and less expensive all around. Why is it that so little has been heard about this possibility, while Congress has been urged to enact various forms of legislation of a highly controversial and doubtful nature?—Kansas City Star.

Perhaps the reason why so little has been heard about it is because people have not yet recovered their speech after being dumfounded by the fact that the Supreme Court would hold such a legal monstrosity constitutional.

And now comes an official spokesman for the New Deal and boastfully affirms, what Farming charged at the time, that the court so held not because it was good law but good politics to go along with the course of the New Deal!

That their posterity should for one moment tolerate such a crass piece of class legislation must make those patriots who fought to the death against taxation without representation turn over in their graves.

"SAFE" DRIVERS CAUSE ACCIDENTS.

Ninety per cent of traffic accidents are caused by experienced, supposedly safe drivers, not by the inexperienced motorists, said Ralph Lee, safety expert, at the recent Western Safety Conference. He cited a California survey which showed that 75 per cent of traffic fatalities in that state were chargeable to drivers with an average of eight years experience, who had never had a previous accident.

Finally, he said, before accidents can be prevented, the popular belief that the great bulk of them are caused by a relatively few congenitally reckless or incompetent persons, must be corrected. It is no longer true.

Over-estimating safety factors has turned many a driver who used to be careful, into a dangerous menace on the highways. Where the cars of a few years ago gave you a thrill at 40, the cars of today do 60 and 70 with ease. That makes for comfortable motoring when all goes well—but lack of vibration, and motor smoothness doesn't help when you career head on into another car at a mile-a-minute clip. And the fact that today's highways are safe, from an engineering standpoint, when compared to the roads of yesterday, doesn't help when you experience a blow-out while you're hitting it up—or speed around a curve to find the road blocked and insufficient space to stop.

It is the average, experienced, "safe" driver who is causing today's accidents. This is the driver who must be reached by law enforcement agencies, and who must be appealed to by safety campaigns that are to get results.—Industrial News Review.

In vain are we free if we have not talented, honest, impartial and bold judges. Without them our rights, our liberty, our lives and those of every poor man are in the power of the rich and the wicked.—Albert Pike in 1835.

In the harvest time is the time to provide for future needs. The harvest time is here and the careful husbandman will see that no useful piece of provender in the fields will be needlessly allowed to waste. In the preservation of the surplus lies the surest safeguard against want in times of less generous yields. The harvest time is here—today. What lies ahead—for tomorrow and beyond—no one can of a surety foretell.

Our courts—from the justice of the peace to the supreme tribunal in Washington—will always be afflicted with human frailties. So long as that is so the poor must beg for that for which they are unable to pay while the rich can buy whatever he wants at a price. But because that is so is no justification for any one to seek to pack the bench with subservient tools with the avowed purpose of having them hold not with the law as proclaimed and accepted but with the will and pleasure of the "Master".

ALL IN THE POINT.

Once the wag and the wit Set out to make a hit—

The wit he got the rag,

For they laughed at the wag

While they laughed with the wit!

LEANING ON MY HOE.

By Annie L. Towler.
There's much that I remember When I'm leaning on my hoe— The happy days of boyhood, Old friends I used to know, My old home in summer time, My school days, my chum— For when I'm leaning on my hoe These dear old memories come—

The creek below the corn field And the deep old swimming pool, The swing 'neath the apple tree In shade so dense and cool, My mother in the doorway Her brown hair aglow— Oh, there's much that I remember When I'm leaning on my hoe.

News and advertising copy for this column for the week's issue should be submitted to Mr. Bader or mailed direct to us at Hondo not later than Tuesday night of each week. Mr. Bader is authorized to collect and receipt for any business for this paper.

CASTROVILLE, TEXAS, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1937

A NEW REPORTER.

Very much to our regret and wholly of his own volition, Mr. W. F. Naegelin, who has been our faithful and dependable Castroville representative for many years, has, owing to other demands upon his time, discontinued his connection in this capacity with our paper. We have been fortunate in securing Mr. Clyde Bader to take the place vacated by Mr. Naegelin and so ably filled by him. Mr. Bader is a young man and inexperienced in reportorial work, but he is active, energetic and ambitious to make good. Give him your help. He deserves it and will appreciate it. Help him to secure all the news of your town; subscribe for the paper or pay up through him if already a subscriber; and advertise your business by giving it publicity through our advertising columns by giving him the advertising copy. He will take care of any business entrusted to him for the paper. Any favors extended Mr. Bader or business entrusted to him will be appreciated by me and have my careful attention.
